Makeover
boosts sports legacy
at Hornfair Park

by Pat Greenwood

GAME ON: Deputy Mayor
Jim Gillman and Greenwich
Council Leader Chris
Roberts meet Charlton
locals to celebrate

A PARK which stretches from Shooters Hill across to the QE Hospital in Woolwich looks set to leave a big new legacy of sporting opportunities for local people after next year's Olympic Games. Hornfair Park in Charlton will also be refurbished to nationally-recognised 'Green Flag' award-winning standards. First off, the park is to get new changing rooms, prior to transforming the big open space for the footballers, rugby players and cricketers of the future. It's thanks to a successful Greenwich Council bid for £95,000 from the London Marathon Trust. The money for the changing rooms comes on top of £100,000 already secured from the Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA). This spring, the council will be bidding for a further grant to install a BMX racing track at the top end of the park. It also hopes to land more cash to modernise the park's historic Lido and turn it into a heated 50-metre pool. All in all, the borough is seeking to get the best possible deal for local residents out of a London-wide initiative called 'Playground to Podium'.

In my opinion

Dancing keeps me on my toes

EVER since I was a little girl I remember my mum taking me to shows and leaving them thinking "wow I wish I could dance like that!" I've always had an interest in dance and I had my first class when I was seven-years-old. I remember walking into the upstairs studio and feeling very nervous as I was introduced and all eyes were on me. When the class was over I didn't want to leave because I loved it so much. Since then I have taken up three more styles of dancing and have been going for eight years, the opportunities and experiences I've had with my dance school have been amazing.

One day I want to take my dancing further to America, and hopefully I will be able to do it as my career. I feel lots of teenagers these days stay at home and watch TV, or play computer games when they could be outside playing football or joining a club to keep them active. Dancing isn't the only sport around, there are so many different types and there's something for everyone. Also, with the Olympics coming up in 2012 I'm certain there will be plenty of events and fundraisers and this will be a great time for people of all ages to get involved. With any sport you choose it's all the same, you have to have commitment, dedication and passion. Of course you can't expect to be the best the first time you try anything, and the more times you do it - and if you practice regularly - it will really help you to improve. This particular time in my life is very important to me. At the moment I am currently studying and taking my GCSEs, so I find it hard to make time for my dancing. However, with my family's support and my weekends spent revising, I still manage to cope. It all comes down to balancing it equally in the end, sometimes I find it stressful, but chocolate usually cures that. If I can do it, so can you.

Get behind the wheel for new transport plans

RESIDENTS are invited to help steer future plans for transport in the borough. Greenwich Council is drawing up a Draft Second Local Implementation Plan (LIP2) which sets out proposals for an effective transport network for the future. The LIP2 proposes measures for a local transport network, while also working towards an effective London-wide transport network. The strategy also outlines how the borough intends to tackle local transport issues and challenges. Every borough is required to prepare a LIP and residents are being asked to give their views as part of a consultation which ends on March 14. Locals can see the draft

Local Implementation Plan documents online. They are also available at local libraries, the Crown Building, 48 Woolwich New Road, SE18 6HQ, and at Riverside House, Woolwich High Street, SE18 6BU. The plan includes 11 key objectives which centre around increasing sustainable travel capacity and the opportunities for trips to and from major centres of employment within the borough. It also aims to ensure the network enables all residents and visitors to access health, education, employment, social and leisure facilities within and beyond the borough. Tower to the people

First step of church facelift is complete

by Pat Greenwood

AN internationally-renowned church with high hopes of a major makeover hosted a special thanksgiving service for its newly-restored tower.

The newly-appointed Bishop of Southwark, the Rt Revd Chris Chessun, officiated at the event at St Alfege Church in the heart of the Greenwich World Heritage Site, on Sunday afternoon, January 30.

The £500,000 project was made possible through a bequest from a long-standing member of the congregation.

Now St Alfege is launching a fund-raising appeal for the cleaning and restoration of its east portico, which faces the high street, and for better disabled access. There is no level access into the church, across the courtyard or into the church hall.

St Alfege - the first of a series designed by Nicholas Hawksmoor, a pupil of Sir Christopher Wren - needs £750,000 for its total makeover plans.

The vicar, the Rev Christopher Moody, said: "The church is at the very heart of Greenwich town centre - a significant visitor attraction and architectural statement."

He added: "Its restoration plays an important part in regenerating this part of the town. We very much hope that local people will want to give our plans every support."

April 19, 2012, sees the 1,000th anniversary of the martyrdom of St Alfege, an Archbishop of Canterbury, and it will be marked with a special programme of arts and community events.

The church hopes to have at least cleaned the lower part of the portico by the Spring of next year. The millennium of the death St Alfege also coincides with Her Majesty the Queen's jubilee, the designation of Greenwich as a Royal Borough, and the London Olympics when the town centre will be playing host to visitors from across the world.

Step on to the property ladder

New council scheme helps working families

by Hilary Bryan

A new scheme set up by Greenwich Council has opened for business, with the aim of providing homes for working families.

Meridian Homes Start Limited was created by the council as a ground-breaking initiative to help families who would otherwise find it hard to buy or rent on the open market.

The company is offering high quality houses at discounted rents of around 20 per cent below market rent levels. Homes will be advertised through Greenwich Time and the first 28 houses, located across the borough in Blackheath, Charlton, Eltham, Woolwich and Abbey Wood, will shortly be on offer.

Most of the refurbished two and three bedroom homes have individual gardens. Prospective tenants must meet a set of criteria and priority will be given to families with a household income of less than £50,000 and to those whose current home is overcrowded.

Applicants will be evaluated and shortlisted, and the first tenants are likely to be signed up by the end of March.

Cllr Steve Offord, the council's cabinet member for housing said: "By investing in this company, the council has created an exciting new housing option for people on lower incomes who struggle to find suitable family homes in the private sector."

"We aim to increase the range of homes available through this company in the future and invest in further options to help those people who can afford it to move into home ownership."

The new housing company comes on the tail of Greenwich Council letting the first newly-built council homes in 20 years. The borough was able to build more than 50 new homes for larger families following successful funding bids to the government's Local Authority House Building Programme which allowed local authorities to build new council homes in two decades.

Greenwich is also among the top London boroughs for carrying improvements to its council homes under the national Decent Homes programme with more than 80 per cent of its council homes now meeting the standard.

Borough BRIEFS

Matters of mental health

AROUND 40 stalls are expected at a Mental Health and Wellbeing fair on Friday, February 11.

The free event has been organised to raise awareness of the importance of mental wellbeing. It takes place at the Public Hall, Woolwich Town Hall from 10am to 5pm.

Visitors can learn about local therapies and the range of local services and resources on offer across the borough. Stallholders will include local mental health organisations, charities and voluntary groups.

They'll offer advice and information on a wide variety of subjects from Depression and Dementia to Tai Chi and books on prescription. Further details from Robert Bridgewater on 020-8921 3032.

Scam bin venues

TRADING standards officers will be out offering advice to the public this week. It's all part of their SCAMNESTY month activities which are designed to raise awareness about scam offers through the post. Local people can deposit any scam mail in a SCAMNESTY bin at the Waterfront Leisure Centre, Woolwich, from 10am to 1pm on Friday, February 11 and at the Eltham Centre from 10am to 1pm on Wednesday February 16.

The overarching aim of the scheme is to leave a sporting legacy for the capital after the Games.

Hornfair Park is the very latest of the borough's open spaces to benefit, and, once again, the idea is to have a whole range of activities available in one location for future generations to enjoy. Cllr John Fahy, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for culture and Olympics, said: "This latest grant for the changing rooms is an important contribution to the development and future of Hornfair Park."

He added: "It fits perfectly with our plans to provide a lasting legacy following next year's Olympics and encourage more people to get a taste for healthy sports and activities."

The make-over plans include the creation of an all-weather cricket pitch. Meanwhile, the Council will be submitting its application for the BMX track to the Mayor of London's 'Play Sport' fund. If all goes to plan there'll be a BMX club in Hornfair Park, with coaching from qualified instructors and the track would host local BMX racing competitions.

Fair play

BMX is now an Olympic Sport and a world class BMX track will be created in the Olympic Park.

Greenwich Council Leader Chris Roberts and Deputy Mayor, Jim Gillman, visited Hornfair Park last week with a group of 10 pupils from nearby Charlton Manor Primary School. Cllr Roberts told GT: "There is huge potential here. It's also a chance for the Mayor of London to support Greenwich Council in its aim to create an even better Olympic-legacy for the residents of this borough."

Golf fan Harshdeep, 10, said: "I'm looking forward to the BMX track here. I've had my mountain bike for about six months now, and I'd probably come down in the summertime."

Maya, 11, is currently enjoying volleyball at school and said: "Having new things in this park will make it more attractive. I may cycle here more in the summer."

Fix it before someone is killed

FOR over 50 years we have had a crossing on Trafalgar Road opposite Christchurch Way and the church but for the past month the crossing lights have been out of action. This may seem unimportant to the council but for us residents and other pedestrians it has been a nightmare trying to cross the busy Trafalgar Road. I myself have had to go all the way along the road to use the other crossing area at the junction of Blackwall Lane, which means I have to do a detour all the way along the road on the opposite side of the road to get to the shops etc. Unfortunately I have a problem with my legs and have to walk with a walking stick so the longer walk is not doing me much good. I have seen many people struggling to cross the road at the crossing without any lights opposite Christchurch Way and the church and it has been really difficult for them. This includes mothers with prams/buggies, elderly people who have a problem with walking and children. They have to wait for a kind motorist to stop but then they have to stand in the middle of the road until another kind motorist (which does not happen half the time) to allow them to get to the other side of the road. I predict that there will be a fatal injury or even a death soon on that part of the road. I have not seen any workmen working on the lights on that part at all. The electrical box has got fencing around it but that has been there for a month now and does not appear to have any workmen working there. I want to know why us residents and pedestrians are having to dice with death to cross that part of the road? If you are not going to have lights there anymore then at least put in black and white stripes with beacons so we have some chance of crossing the road at this point. I am a council resident and I pay my full rent and Council Tax. What am I paying for if we are not getting the full amenities? Please do something about this problem before someone is fatally injured. I for one would find life a bit easier if we get our crossing back to normal.

Margaret Taylor,
Greenwich

Transport for London replies:
The traffic signals were damaged in a road traffic collision on 12 January, which destroyed the signal controller and the electrical supply pillar. From the 12 January to the 17 January, the controller and electricity supply pillar was disconnected, dug out and removed. The new controller was then installed, configured and commissioned. Since 17 January we have been chasing the electricity supply company (UK Power Networks) daily for the reconnection of supply. The electricity was finally reconnected on 3 February and the traffic signals are now on and working.

Dogs belong in parks as well!

I AM not a dog owner but cannot understand the misguided views of Ed Hall saying that part of the Olympic legacy should be to have a dog-free Greenwich Park. Dog owners should pick up dog mess, not be barred from one of the few lovely places where they can safely walk their pets. Recently in Paris, where they have banned dogs from parks, walking the streets has become the nightmare of trying to miss dog mess on the pavements. One of the joys of a walk in the park is seeing both children and dogs having fun in open space - don't take that away from them or their owners/parents! Next we'll be banning children for dropping litter or causing too much noise!

A great night...

I VENTURED over to Greenwich for the open mic night at the Star and Garter on the old Woolwich Road the other Friday. It was a very interesting evening. Basically it did what it said on the tin, an open mic for all comers. There was an eclectic mix of comedy, poetry and music. There was a mix of talent too, yet all were given due appreciation for their efforts by the audience. Talent has to start somewhere. Well done to Steve Bowditch for organising this opportunity to perform. Or just watch, if you prefer, without a press gang.

Mums - don't leave prams outside

I WOULD like to alert mums about leaving their pushchairs outside. I left mine outside my house whilst taking my four-year-old to playschool. This took me 10 minutes max. By the time I returned someone had taken my pushchair. Obviously when on maternity leave and with times being hard I would hate for a other mums to be caught out like this. Either someone stole it or a scrap merchant took it without permission Thanks for your help.

IN TRAINING: youngsters make the most of the new track at St Paul's

We're all set!

Greenwich goes up a gear for Youth Games

ON your marks for a concerted Greenwich attack on this year's London Youth Games as one of the host boroughs for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Last year Greenwich finished a creditable 10th out of 33 boroughs. The goal this time is a top five finish with the intention of doing even better in Olympic year. GT starts this regular 'Go for Greenwich' feature with a special athletics initiative...

by Peter Cordwell

TRACK and field athletics will be the blue ribbon event at Crystal Palace in July.

And coaches and young athletes are confident of a good performance, in the annual event sponsored by Balfour Beatty.

Two new initiatives have been set up - one at St Paul's Academy in Abbey Wood and another, for disabled athletes, at Charlton School.

St Paul's have got brand new athletics facilities, which will benefit young sportsmen and women providing training in a number of disciplines. Michael Donnelly, PE teacher at St Paul's, said: "As well as the indoor facilities, we've got a 100-metre track, an area for shot putt, sand pit for the jumping events as well as an area for the javelin. We've got everything you need really."

In addition, a disability athletics academy is being set up in Charlton and a recent £5,000 grant from the London Youth Games will be used to set up a disability athletics league among Greenwich schools.

Another league is being organised for Year 7 and 8 students at secondary schools as feeder into the Cambridge Harriers Athletics Club.

IN THE RUNNING: Michael Donnelly, PE teacher at St Paul's tests out the track

"With the two academies and the leagues I'm confident we'll do much better in July," said Melissa Catchpole, the 29-year-old former county sprinter who is coaching the Greenwich teams.

She added: "We're in touch with schools to spot new talent and we're also working closely with the local athletics club, Cambridge Harriers, so improvement is guaranteed!"

Pupil David Omardia said: "The London Youth Games gives everyone here something to aim for. It would be a great feeling to be selected for the team. I'm going to work hard and hopefully I'll get selected."

Chigozie Orjih added: "I've been really looking forward to the athletics club and I hope that I can learn some new skills and develop my technique. I'm hoping to improve my triple jump as it's my favourite athletics event."

Renique Joseph said: "I think it's a great thing that the Olympics are coming to London. It should help to inspire young people to get involved in athletics. My dream would be to one day perform at that kind of level."

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for culture and the Olympics, told GT: "This year's London Youth Games will be more exciting than ever as we go there to stamp our authority as an Olympic borough.

"A great place to start is in athletics and these new initiatives are just what's needed to drive us forward."

Tree-mendous!

Children's Centre puts down roots in garden

YOUNGSTERS at a children's centre planted their roots firmly in Thamesmead when 30 trees were donated to them by a supermarket.

The saplings were given to the Waterways Children's Centre by Sainsbury's after parents dug deep and collected a haul of vouchers from the store.

The centre on Southwood Road is part of the Forest Schools scheme which is aimed at getting children more in touch with the environment.

Teacher Carrie Gowen told GT: "We wanted to use the trees to start us as a Forest School, which is about children learning in the outdoors, particularly the really natural outdoors."

"In a Forest School you don't weed the space, but let it grow. The idea is that the children 'ponder and wander' doing what we used to when we were little, going out and playing – and not a park or a garden, but a natural space."

Research has shown that boys in particular benefit from outdoor play and the practical skills that are gained from it.

"It captures their imagination, and in Thamesmead we've got some really nice open spaces," Carrie said.

The species planted included apple, hazel and cherry trees.

The teacher added: "Hopefully over the next 20 years this will become a really diverse habitat."

Cllr Jackie Smith, the council's member for children and young people said: "The planting of these trees and the wild garden here at Waterways Children's Centre will provide a great source of outdoor learning for the children, now and in the future."

Share your 2012 celebration plans

NEXT year looks set to be action-packed for local people. Not only are the Olympic and Paralympic Games taking place, but there are also celebrations being planned to mark The Queen's Diamond Jubilee, and other events to celebrate Greenwich becoming a Royal Borough.

With all this going on, it means that the public and emergency services must plan well ahead to make sure they have the right resources in place to ensure everything runs like clockwork. Greenwich Council has the responsibility for collecting and logging information about all the events taking place in the borough in 2012. And event organisers are being asked to register their event with the council, whether it is big or small. These could be anything from a community street party or a fete, to film festival or sporting tournament or community celebrations for the Royal Jubilee. The council would also like to know about any plans for events or community celebrations for the Royal Wedding this April.

Cllr John Fahy, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for Culture and the Olympics, said: "There's no doubt that London will be the place to be in 2012, whether you live here or travel in to experience the huge array of events taking place in the most exciting year of the capital's long history. We want to ensure the plethora of planned events and celebrations can go ahead safely and we need to start planning now."

• Log your event's details with the council by e-mailing jubilee-olympic-events@greenwich.gov.uk Even if you have only a date and a brief outline of your plans please let the council know before the end of March. Particularly important are any events held between the beginning of May and the end of October next year.

□ Cultural public events, such as exhibitions or festivals that event organisers would like to advertise to the general public, can also be entered into The Culture Diary. This is a calendar of all events taking place in London during 2012 and will be another way to publicise events. Register at www.theculturediary.com

Young designers give some old clothes a second chance - and do their bit for the environment while they're at it

by Rod Kitson

ALL IN THE JEANS: model shows off

IT is said that fashions and trends are recycled through the ages, but Kidbrooke students took the phrase literally when they created an array of new garments from a heap of discarded old clothes.

The Level 3 Creative and Media Diploma pupils from the school on Corelli Road were working with Oxfam to raise awareness of the value in recycling unwanted textiles.

The eight students designed and made corsets from discarded denim, and their creations were in a window display at Oxfam's Westbourne Grove boutique, near Notting Hill until February 7.

Tutor Sharron Humphrey told GT: "The students approached this particular branch as Oxfam has been working with well known designers, such as Henry Holland, to create one off pieces from unwanted clothes, and this is their flagship store."

The recycled garments went under the brand name of 'Re-Threads', and the young designers were hoping that customers left feedback on the items during the time the clothes were displayed.

The project was inspired by the huge number of unwanted clothes that end up in landfills every year. Chantelle Dowding, 17 said: "I have overcome my fear of using recycled clothes, I know I am no longer alone in re-using discarded fabrics."

Salamatah Bah, 19 added: "The project has changed my view on recycling and it is exciting for people to see my work in the shop window."

The students worked briefly with the Blackheath branch of Oxfam, and their designs were so well received that they wanted to reach a wider audience.

"I think this is an inspiring project that has raised awareness in the local community," said Bolaji Farinto, 18.

Wheel challenge

A PRIMARY school headteacher spent a day in a wheelchair - to raise awareness of the daily challenges faced by disabled people. Jon Goulding, from Millennium Primary in John Harrison Way on the Greenwich Peninsula, did the "Wheelchair 4 a Day" challenge as part of the school's Disability Focus Week.

The headteacher said: "It was rather unusual being shorter than everyone and people were trying to do too much for me." And teacher Gwyneth Davies travelled to the school by public transport using a wheelchair and said: "It took me an hour to travel from Lee to Blackheath, pushing up hill. Every bump in the road was like a mountain."

Are you making the most of your money?

TAKING control of your finances early on can prevent problems further down the line.

That's the advice from Greenwich Council which is urging residents to keep track of their money so they can cope with unforeseen circumstances.

If you need advice about money matters, there are several organisations in the borough that can help – these include:

- Greenwich Money Advice Service (part of Greenwich Citizens Advice Bureaux). GMAS provides telephone advice via a Debt Line on 020 8317 3342. Session times are Monday and Thursday: 10-11am; and Tuesday and Wednesday: 2-3pm.
- Meridian Money Advice Service – ring

020 8293 3432 to arrange an appointment. National organisation which can help include:

- Money Made Clear, the Financial Services Authority's website which offers practical advice and a range of tools to help you manage your money. There is also help if you want to set up a bank account. Visit www.moneymadeclear.org.uk or ring 0300 500 5000 for more information.
- National Debtline – 0808 808 4000 or visit www.nationaldebtline.co.uk/england-wales/
- Visit Greenwich Council's website at www.greenwich.gov.uk/benefits for more information about these and other organisations that may be able to help.

It's also important to check you're not missing out on benefits and tax credits. Greenwich residents can get a free benefits check by contacting Greenwich Welfare Rights Service on 020 8921 6375 (or 18001 020 8921 6375 for textphone users).

Greenwich Credit Union offers an easy way to save money or borrow a small loan for anyone living or working in the borough of Greenwich. Visit www.timelinecreditunion.co.uk If you are worried about debt or money problems, the most important thing is to:

- take action sooner rather than later – don't ignore calls or letters.
- talk to creditors
- get specialist advice.

New courses on offer to jobhunters

by Pat Greenwood

K E E N bloggers and twitterers, wannabe designers, broadcasters and filmmakers have a unique chance to develop their skills, thanks to a link-up between Greenwich Council and Ravensbourne.

A range of short courses are now available at low cost to the unemployed and people on benefits. They take place at Ravensbourne, which opened its new campus on Greenwich Peninsula in the autumn.

Greenwich Council is funding the courses, specifically to give residents a broad introduction to the digital age and to the basic skills they need to get into the design and broadcast industries.

Cllr Denise Hyland, the council's cabinet member for regeneration, enterprise and skills, said: "This is a fantastic chance for Greenwich people to learn a new skill in a field they might not otherwise be able to access easily."

She added: "The world of design and the media are becoming increasingly important to the global economy. It's great to see local residents benefiting from the expertise on offer at Ravensbourne - a new state-of-the-art campus in the heart of our borough."

Short courses will include a focus on building your own website to introductions to video and film-making, animation or sound-tracks.

If you are unemployed, the courses on offer through

GLLaB, the Greenwich local labour and business initiative, will include how to get the most out of your design and photographic software, and an introduction to setting up as a creative freelancer - including tips on basic accountancy, branding and getting ideas commissioned - as well as a course to help you increase the reach and the effectiveness of blogging.

Tom Callanan, 27, from Woolwich, took advantage of a GLLaB offer last year to take a course at Ravensbourne.

The former pupil of The John Roan School in Blackheath said: "I took the TV Broadcasting course, and ended up producing and directing a three-minute programme in and around Charlton as part of it."

Tom who is keen to develop his film-making skills further added: "I'm hoping to do another short course in Sound this September."

• FIND out more by ringing 0800 0130 730, at www.greenwich.gov.uk/business or by contacting Ravensbourne directly at greenwich.digitalskills@rave.ac.uk.

If you are unemployed and living in Greenwich and you're interested, ring the GLLaB Work & Learn Centre on the Greenwich Peninsula on 020-8858 7792.

GLLaB lad makes a big impression with the Watchdog team

by Peter Cordwell

TEMITOPE Ibitoye - "Tops" to his mates and very quickly to colleagues at the BBC - is making a big impression during a month-long work experience session at the Beeb.

Tops, 19, from Charlton, was put forward by Greenwich Local Labour and Business (GLLaB) for the BBC's 2012 London Work Experience Scheme offered to the six Olympic host boroughs.

The corporation was so impressed by the candidates from Greenwich that they selected seven of them instead of the planned three.

Tops was one of them and his energy and enthusiasm soon made him popular with the team he is working with on Rogue Traders.

Tops, who went to Blackheath Bluecoat secondary school in Blackheath, told GT: "I'm finding it a lot of fun, I'm learning so much and I'm really enjoying my time here.

At the BBC I'm learning lots of stuff, how they get the stories and how they create the programme. It's great for me because I'm looking to work in film as a producer or in the theatre. They are my passions

"I'm in the Watchdog department working with the team on Rogue Traders. I got involved after making a short film about homelessness with two other young people from Hackney.

"At the BBC I'm learning lots of stuff, how they get the stories and how they create the programme. It's great for me because I'm looking to work in film as a producer or in the theatre. They are my passions.

"I'm very grateful to GLLaB for giving me this chance and this week I'm going to the Hackney Empire to speak at an event run by New Direction, who are working with young people across the host boroughs."

GLLaB is starting work on the second round of work placements with the BBC.

A local event at The Eltham Centre next week will include a presentation by a BBC representative, and a 'live' case study - someone from the first round of placements to tell the audience about his or her experience.

The audience will include GLLaB customers who meet the criteria of the programme. Their levels of literacy and numeracy will be assessed on the day, and they will be given information to take away before being called back into GLLaB for a final exam which will determine whether or not they will be put forward for the placements.

Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 222

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time.
For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

1 Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

2 Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

3 Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

4 Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

SMILES BETTER: Paper Smile with Daniel (front) and Paul (second from back). Below, Paul and Katy rehearse

A musician with links to Oasis is hosting a rock 'n' roll gig to raise funds for musical workshops to give blind and partially sighted people the skills to form bands of their own

HE plays in Noel Gallagher's favourite band, and later this month his new band plays a charity gig in Abbey Wood. Paul Fuller is the drummer in Proud Mary, the first group that Gallagher signed to his record label, Sour Mash in the early noughties. The blues band have toured worldwide with the likes of Neil Young, The Black Crowes and Ryan Adams, and now Paul's new band, Paper Smile are playing at the Abbey Arms help raise money for Blind Independence Greenwich. He told Scene: "I came off a tour with Proud Mary last year, we played from July up to Christmas, and when we're not touring I sing in my covers band. "We play music from the '50s to more modern stuff - Elvis, The Beatles, The Who, up to Oasis and The Verve. Basically, everything that's rock 'n' roll and will get people into music." The gig is on February 25 at the venue on Wilton Road and was organised by Daniel 'DreadyZeppelin' Pickett, who will also be doing a turn in Paper Smile. The money raised will go towards a scheme that Daniel's organising to help blind and partially sighted people learn to play musical instruments. And he knows what it's like to have sight problems from his own experience a few years ago. Daniel - a tutor and blues artist, said: "I was blind for three years. I had a thyroid problem called Graves Disease. "I had an operation in 2008 and thankfully I can see again. Before then I couldn't read a newspaper headline start in the spring. "My blindness inspired me to get involved with BIG. The only thing I could do to give me independence and creativity when I was blind was music. I could release any stress and pressure that life threw at me," he added. Daniel hopes that the students will be able to perform at future fund-raising band nights. He said: "There's not that many artistic the musicians were blind themselves.

"It's progressive and it gives people their own independence. The more money - and awareness - we can raise, the better." Drummer Paul will be teaching the visually impaired students how to play the percussion instrument he has mastered. He said: "If they learn to play the drums or guitar it shows that they can still do whatever they want. "I've been playing drums since the age of five - my granddad was a drummer, my cousin is, my brother is - it's in my blood!"

Motivational course

Now get to the Point

FEELING de-motivated? Bored at school or work? If you are male and aged between 13 and 17-years-old, there is a course this February that could help you break the cycle. It's on at The Point in Woolwich on Saturdays and is designed to kick boredom and despair into touch. Subjects tackled include relationships, health, school and work, with sessions looking at the issues that hold us back. The course is called Raising Aspirations Of Young People, and organisers hope to re-motivate and help the young men who take part to reach their potential and find realistic ways forward. Participants in the scheme will also get accreditation to add to their CV. On every Saturday in February from 11.30 - 1.30pm at The Point, 47 Woolwich New Road For more info visit The Point or call one of personal advisors on 020 8921 8224

Hair today...

Tangled up in new technology

IN their wildest fantasies the Brothers Grimm could never have imagined their fairy tales as flawless computer generated animations.

The latest yarn to get the Disney treatment is Rapunzel.

In a frankly baffling move the story has been renamed Tangled, apparently in an effort to make the film appeal to young lads as well as to lasses. Answers on a postcard please...

Gender specific titles aside (and with a little help from Pixar), Tangled is a milestone for Disney - it is its 50th animated feature in its near-100-year history.

Unlike the Princess and the Frog - a classically animated feature, this is a thoroughly modern, CGI driven re-telling of the classic story. Of course, this is not Sleeping Beauty, and Rapunzel (voiced by Mandy Moore) has all the necessary sassiness expected from a 21st Century heroine. She has magical golden hair and gets locked up by her evil passive-aggressive mother in a lonely (and probably very boring) tower. I would certainly like to know why Disney animations often feature evil and manipulative women in their shows - there is something going on there - but they do make great villains and Mother Gothel is no exception. Tangled will be popular with the kids and there are some cool animal characters including a great action-hero horse called Maximus and Rapunzel's cute pet chameleon. There are many musical numbers, but it is all pretty seamless and good fun with a nice fresh edge.

And at 100-minutes long it's more that the short back and sides that many an animation offers. A good way to let your hair down, you could say. It is reportedly the second most expensive movie ever made, coming in at a cool $260 million to produce. Now that's a lot of trips to the hairdressers.

Back down to earth

Record companies have been losing money hand over fist on illegal downloads. A section of the industry has finally seen the light, but what will it mean for artists like Bruno Mars?

IT'S tough for workaday pop-fodder to raise its head above the parapet of bubblegum-MORdom these days - an age when fans are killing their favourite artists with kindness.

Well, not kindness exactly, illegal downloads.

It's no secret that the music business is in sharp decline.

Album sales are at an all time low, and the industry has been slow in moving to keep pace with t'interweb's ever-changing landscape.

Artists are afraid. Afraid of not having hits and being dropped from their beleaguered labels which are not investing in artist development. Thus the conveyor belt of ever-paling imitations churn out the radio hits, which by their very nature become more and more informed by X-Factor and its ilk.

It's not conducive to creativity - could Prince or PJ Harvey have survived in today's climate without the long leash that their generous contracts afforded? It seems unlikely. And it's all very well to trumpet the virtues of the internet and its ability to get music 'out there' instantly, but without the big advances, all but the most cynical of musicians are left to offset their meagre earnings with a 9-5 job. It's hard to see a Neil Young or a David Bowie doing a day at the factory and coming home to write Ziggy Stardust or Tonight's The Night.

But that's the price of progress, right? The web has bred an immediate culture in which fans of music - and indeed film - literally can't wait to get their hands on the latest releases and will download them any way they can.

In an effort to stem the tide - and in the boldest and most forward-thinking move by the post-download music biz - two major labels have done something they should have done a long time ago.

Fans of artists on the Sony and Universal labels no longer have to wait weeks to download new singles they hear on the radio: as soon as the song is released to the radio stations it can be legitimately downloaded.

It's a simple idea, and the two companies will be hoping the move will stem the haemorrhaging flow of profits that have resulted from illicit downloads. And if it works, the other majors will surely be quick to follow suit.

It's not a move that will help line the pockets of Bruno Mars, a Hawaiian popstar whose name makes him sound like the illegitimate offspring of Sacha Baron Cohen and Batman. He's signed to Electra, you see, but has been doing a roaring trade never the less, scoring the second highest selling single of 2010 with his debut single Just The Way You Are.

You might not think you know who he is, but you do. YouTube him and the grim realization will dawn that Mr Mars has been as virulent as the black plague on the radio waves over the past year, with his almost-unique brand of Ne-Yo-aping autotune-grime. He's been a prolific writer and producer for other artists over the past couple of years, and his own latest offering, Earth To Mars is his version of a mix tape which includes all of his leftover songs and demos that he put together for other artists over the years. Brilliant.

A tired version of events

IS it a comedy or is it a tragedy? Or is it simply depressing?

Barney's Version is based on the book of the same name by Canadian author, Mordecai Richler.

The film tells the complex emotional story of Barney Panowski, a Jewish TV producer. Now old, desperately lonely and increasingly forgetful, he reflects on his life from its bohemian beginnings to its ignominious end.

Initially, it's a life full of hope, full of family and friends. But the mood quickly darkens with the death of a baby and the suicide of his wife. A second marriage follows - an entertaining and surprisingly robust cameo from Minnie Driver - but, betrayed by his best friend Boogie (Scott Speedman), this too is doomed. With the subsequent disappearance of Boogie in rather baffling circumstances, the tone darkens further. The arrival of Miriam

Grant (Rosamund Pike) provides some much needed light relief. She is, without doubt, the love of Barney's life and at last, he is happy. But Director Richard Lewis dwells only briefly on their idyllic family life choosing instead to focus on Barney's selfish existence; his sulking at dinner parties, endless hours spent in bars and unforgivably, his failure to support her return to work and attend her inaugural radio show. His sexual betrayal while she visits their son - "it meant nothing to me" he wails in self-pity - is more than she can bear and she moves out and into the arms of her producer of whom Barney is already insanely jealous. Barney is lost: like a child, he is terrified of being alone and calls her number at all hours of the night. With the death of his father and closest friend, Izzy (Dustin Hoffman) and the terrifying onset of Alzheimer's, the foundations of Barney's life are truly shaken to the core. Despite Director Lewis's attempts to lighten the mood - this time with moments of humour - Hoffman for example expires in a brothel, it is too little, too late. Pike is surprisingly good. In her first meaty role since Die Another Day, she is tender and caring, elegant and self-assured. Hoffman is her equal but less comfortable with humour. Giamatti is the surprise casting; not naturally empathetic, he fails to convince either as friend or as lover.

Verdict
Stay indoors for a nice cheerful evening with Eastenders. 3/10

That's Wright!

Ian's kid does his stuff as Powell makes it three out of three Yeovil Town 0 Charlton 1.

by KEVIN NOLAN

ANOTHER scrappy game, another 1-0 squeaker, another Bradley Wright-Phillips second half winner - Charlton march on. And so does the optimism brought in by Chris Powell, the people's choice as manager.

Three successive wins since Powell arrived three weeks ago have featured three clean sheets, statistics guaranteed to warm the cockles of any new gaffer's heart, much less one bred to defend. His parsimonious influence is beginning to spread through the club.

A deceptively detached figure at times, Wright-Phillips had just two chances. The first of them was horribly scuffed wide shortly after the interval and wasted the wholehearted spadework of forward partner Joe Anyinsah. Like all natural predators, Ian's kid kept the faith. At least one more opportunity would happen along before time was up on this wind-battered dross. He needed just to hang in there.

Three minutes past the hour, his patience was rewarded. Shaking off his marker in a hopelessly congested penalty area, Wright-Phillips leapt high, twisted in the air and headed Johnnie Jackson's outswinging corner emphatically into the top right corner. It wasn't the kind of goal you would readily associate with his dad but then again, he scored all sorts.

The mechanics of making a single strike stand up under increasingly desperate pressure hardly ranks as top-notch entertainment but these ground-out results make the difference.

That the Addicks pulled it off again had much to do with the know-how of veteran centre backs Christian Dailly and Gary Doherty. Dailly calmly organised the resistance while, at his elbow, Doherty was a tower of strength, the highlight of his splendid contribution a death-or-glory block on Andrew Tutte's point-blank certainty.

Booked for an early foul on Oliver Johnson, the old sweat rode a disciplinary tightrope with an ugly challenge on Andrew Williams late on. He was lucky to escape a second yellow card.

Flanking the old boys, comparative youngsters Simon Francis and Matt Fry did their bit. Scapegoated by the Valley boogymen recently, Francis turned in a solid, sensible performance.

Apart from one comically sliced clearance, which reduced Rob Elliot to a scrambling, undignified bag of nerves, Fry did likewise. The keeper himself was a mixture of awful kicking, shaky punching and bravery among flying boots and heads.

The first half was shaded by the Glovers. After Jackson's third-minute free kick produced a fine save from Stephen Henderson, most of the action was borne by a stiff following breeze towards the visitors' goal.

Unmarked Town captain Paul Huntington wastefully headed Andrew Welsh's accurate corner over the bar, then popped up again at the far post when Andrew Williams' corner from the opposite flank bobbled through the goalmouth but blasted wide of a gaping net.

Yeovil's off-target shooting continued with Tutte and Welsh both firing half chances past the right post. For the Addicks, Jackson's dangerous free kick stood alone. But that was to change as Wright-Phillips came alive.

A more willowy figure than Ian, young Bradley shows little of the "dog in the fight" aggression of his old man, not that he's in any way a plum. It's that natural finishing ability, though, as much as the fact he's a spitting image, that rolls back the years. If you're still looking for Mr. Wright, check out this elegant chip off the old battling block. Charlton (4-4-2): Elliot, Francis, Doherty, Dailly, Fry, Wagstaff, Semedo, McCormack (Racon 23), Jackson, Wright-Phillips (Benson 80), Anyinsah (Eccleston 80). Not used: Worner, Reid, Fortune, Jenkinson.
